

JOHN JAY COLLEGE
THE CITY UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
OF CRIMINAL JUSTICE

DEAN OF GRADUATE STUDIES
OFFICE OF GRADUATE STUDIES

JANNETTE O. DOMINGO, PhD

Dear John Jay Master's Students;

There is an exciting new opportunity for doctoral study that may be of special interest to John Jay master's students. The CUNY Criminal Justice Doctoral Program is adding a new concentration in Policy, Oversight and Administration. This specialization is targeted towards those interested in administration, oversight, and policy analysis and related areas of criminal justice, and it is designed so that highly qualified students completing John Jay College master's degree programs can progress into doctoral-level studies. More information is available at the following:

<http://jjconline.net/jpress/crjpoa/>

While the program is grounded in the study of criminal justice, students can combine their master's and doctoral studies to focus in the following areas:

- Policy analysis involves the analysis of alternative courses of official action to achieve goals. In criminal justice, policy analysis takes place in academic, professional and governmental settings. The techniques of policy analysis increasingly involve research skills taught and applied in doctoral courses and programs.
- Inspection and oversight, as a field of practice, seeks to foster and promote accountability and integrity in public and private organizations through prevention, examination, investigation, audit, detection, elimination and prosecution of fraud, waste and abuse, and through policy research and analysis, as well as standardization of practices, policies, conduct and ethics.
- Protection of life and property is a core objective of fields such as security management, fire protection, homeland security, emergency management, and the preventive aspects of law enforcement. This interdisciplinary field combines perspectives and techniques of law, accounting, public administration, criminal justice, criminal and civil investigation, policy analysis, and operations research.

The concentration is designed for students who are completing or who have completed a master's degree in a related field. Up to 29 credits of graduate credit from a related master's degree can be transferred.

This new concentration will appeal to those seeking higher degrees in the field of criminal justice who work in public agencies, the private sector and non-profit agencies and who are interested in the leadership, administration and policy evaluation in the field of criminal justice.

The application deadline, including submission of GRE scores and letters of reference, is January 15, 2010. Enrollment is limited and admission will be highly competitive. For more information about the program, contact Professor Ned Benton at nbenton@jjay.cuny.edu; Professor Rod Colvin at rcolvin@jjay.cuny.edu; or the Criminal Justice Doctoral Program Executive Officer Prof. Karen Terry at kterry@jjay.cuny.edu.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'J. Domingo', with a stylized flourish at the end.

Jannette O. Domingo, Ph.D.
Dean of Graduate Studies